Contributing to an online course

By contributing to an online course, you will be appearing in materials seen by lots of learners from all over the world. It's not quite the same as appearing in a television show or newspaper article, but you are appearing in 'public', and learners might talk about your contribution in the course.

If you have any questions about this, please have a chat with your contact.

Writing comments

If you are intending to post any comments in the course, please let your contact know. They can give you tips and advice about how to take part.

Learners are likely to associate you with the course organisation, so please be mindful of their reputation, and make sure you have read the FutureLearn Code of Conduct[1] before posting a comment.

The FutureLearn community is very friendly, so don't worry, but if you are concerned about anything please talk to your contact rather than try to deal with it by yourself.
